6 questions that would be good to ask yourself right now

Check the boxes that connect with you

Are you ready? The greatest question to ask yourself right now is: "Am I ready to to commit my life to my child and the mother of my child?" You may end up getting married, you may not. Either way, the three of you will always be connected. Creating a healthy family is the most beneficial way to ensure the future for your child and peace for you and the mother.

Are you ready?

YES
NO

Do you want to? There has to be a driving force that is motivating you. Do you have the desire to be a good father? Your child's life will be impacted greatly by that desire or lack of desire to be a good father. If you choose to be a father, your child, and the mother of your child, deserve a man who is greatly involved in their lives.

YES
NO

Do you want to?

Can you provide? You may not be able to today. However, when making a decision to commit to being a father a man must always have the capacity to understand his limit at providing for his family. Be honest with yourself. You need to know if you should seek better housing and what your financial snapshot looks like. Ask the people providing you this information for help if you need it.

Can you provide?

YES
NO

Can you lead? Fathers need to lead, it's that simple. They do so in serving their family by lovingly guiding them through life. A good father is a man who maintains proper values in his own life and then transfers them into his family for the benefit of their future. You don't tell someone how to do it, you live the life.

NO

Can you lead?

Do you know you're not alone? Good fathers realize that they are not alone. As such, they realize that to raise a child it takes two parents acting as one. When it comes to the mother, both of you need to be on the same page when it involves ideas about parenting. Do each of you have the same dreams, goals and ambitions for your child?

Do you know you're not alone?

YES
NO

How's the family? How well do you know the family of the mother of your child? When considering fatherhood it is good for you to understand just how well you know the important members of your new family. You will be connected to them for along time regardless the relationship of you and the mother.
